"A dynamic regional training program (the last one before the FCCMA Conference) has been prepared for FCCMA members and their key staffers. Former City Manager and current CEO of Strategic Government Resources, Ron Holifield, will provide an engaging and comprehensive perspective on the major political, social, demographic, and technological trends impacting local government leaders. Ron's vantage point as a leader of a national full-service local government recruitment and training firm affords him a unique perspective on the emerging trends, issues, and attitudes that are dramatically affecting the way local government leaders manage their communities in their quest to achieve community visions, desires, and expectations. The program will also include a small panel of Florida City and County Managers who will comment on Mr. Holifield's perspectives and offer their own observations/perspectives, as well as engage attendees in an informal discussion on the key points covered. Attendance at this timely, insightful and engaging program should be a requisite for anyone involved in short- and long-term planning and in making decisions for next year's budget. Don't miss this opportunity to network with your local government colleagues during the lunch that follows this program."
